

Snack Storage Cabinet Review

How do you store healthy snacks?

You can store snacks in bins, baskets, glass jars, or dedicated pantry shelves. If you want to keep healthy snacks ready and accessible, store them where it's easy for you and your family to reach them, be it a kid-height shelf in the pantry or in clear glass jars on the countertop.

Are snapware airtight plastic food containers good?

The Snapware Airtight Plastic Food Container Set we recommended in 2015 had faulty lid flaps that were difficult to close when they were tested again in 2016. This set also held onto food odors and stains more than the competition. (This set is no longer available in these shapes, but there is a set of round containers.)

What are the best food storage containers for leftovers?

Reviewed by MNHQ writer Lucy Cotterill: Read our full LocknLock Six Piece Container Set review. LocknLock make some of the best food storage containers for leftovers thanks to their 100% airtight seal, helping your food stay fresh until you want to eat it.

Is snapware a leak-proof food storage container?

Snapware 4-Cup Total Solution Square Food Storage Container: This model featured four latches and a silicone seal, but it was not leak-proof. In fact, water poured out of it.

Is Anchor Hocking Glass food storage good?

The Anchor Hocking Glass Food Storage Set survived our drop tests, but the containers leaked more than the similarly designed glass Pyrex containers we tested. The flimsy lids in this set also held onto odors more than our picks. Anchor Hocking TrueSeal Glass Storage got a B+ from Good Housekeeping.

Should you label see-through Snack storage containers' snacks'?

Rush Me Home suggests labeling see-through snack storage containers "snacks" so that you can repurpose them for your current preferred snack rather than creating labels for specific items, a handy tip to help keep small pantries in order.
